EDITOR'S NOTE

November's long winter nights are the perfect time to hibernate in front of the television – Cable Guide in hand, of course.

This month's offerings include a celebration of everyone's favourite dysfunctional family, The Simpsons (page 4), plus a look back at Blind Date's highs – and sensational lows (page 8). And don't miss our exclusive interview with the stars of The Sopranos (page 6).

As Ellen MacArthur sets sail on a transatlantic race, we talk to the intrepid yachtswoman about life on the ocean wave (page 10); and meet The Fast Show's Mark Williams as he gets serious in a new Discovery series (page 11).

Rising star Josh Hartnett fills us in on Pearl Harbor (page 12). And sport-wise, we go Down Under (page 126). Happy viewing!

In the Fast lane

The impact of The Fast Show over the past seven years can be measured in several ways, not least by the enduring use of catchphrases such as 'Suits you, Sir', 'Does my bum look big in this?', 'This week I have mostly been eating ...', and 'Which was nice'.

It can also be measured by the number of people, also in the entertainment business, who have become die-hard fans. One such is the American film director John Hughes (The Breakfast Club), who pestered Paul Whitehouse and Charlie Higson, the show's creators, to write a film script for him. 'But we were brutally frank; we just didn't have any ideas,' says Whitehouse.

More famously, Johnny Depp is an avowed devotee of The Fast Show. 'He's larging it up all the time on behalf of The Fast Show,' says Whitehouse, chuckling. 'When I first heard that he was a fan I was a bit sniffy about it, but then his agent got in touch with mine, and we went out for dinner. He did his Rowley Birkin impressions for me; he genuinely knows all the lines. I think I underwhelmed him for a couple of hours.'

That seems unlikely, as Depp has since tried to find cameos for Whitehouse in several of his films, most recently Neverland, about Peter Pan creator JM Barrie, in which he stars with Kate Winslet and which features Whitehouse in a blink-and-you'll-miss-it role as a Scottish stage manager. Depp, in turn, has appeared in a Fast Show 'Suits you' sketch. 'I didn't believe it would happen,' says Whitehouse, 'right up until the old car trundled in. These film people I met were saying, "You gaat Jaahnny Depp! We offered him 20 million dollars and he turned us down!"'

Much to the regret of Depp, not to mention the rest of us, Whitehouse and co have decided to make no more Fast Shows for television. However, the pair are joining Arabella Weir, Simon Day and Mark Williams (who we interview on page 11) and taking the show on the road.

Whitehouse's latest TV project is the second series of the BBC drama Happiness, in which he plays a voice-over artist fighting a losing battle with middle age. Whitehouse is not the only Fast Show graduate to move into more serious TV, I observe. John Thomson, for example, wound up in Cold Feet. So is it a case of the clown wanting to play Hamlet?

'No,' says Whitehouse, with a sharp laugh. 'It's completely the opposite. When I was playing Hamlet, if that's what you can call Happiness, I was thinking how much I wanted to put a silly wig on and shout "arse". That's why we're doing The Fast Show tour.'

Catch The Fast Show, plus other classic British comedies, on UK Gold, which this month celebrates its 10-year anniversary. See listings for details.

Music was her first love

If Lauren Laverne was a contestant on Fanorama, the series on celebrity fandom which she presents for E4, the 24-year-old Wearsider would choose as her specialist subjects Iggy Pop or Steely Dan. 'I'm obsessed with music,' she says. 'My dad's a musician, and I grew up listening to his record collection ... Steely Dan, The Beatles. He's a bit like John Peel. And my brother schooled me in other ways. He got me into Pavement, a big American band. And my love of disco-dancing comes from my mum.'

Laverne also has an enviable record herself in making music. With her brother and two best friends from St Anthony's convent school in Sunderland, she formed Kenickie, named 'after the bad boy in Grease'. At The Club, one of Kenickie's two albums, made the Top Ten, and with the band Mint Royale she later had a top 20 single, Don't Falter. All her pin-ups, she tells me, have been musicians. 'When I was 14 I was going to marry Andy Bell, the guitarist from a band called Ride, and my friend Marie was going to marry the singer. I've never fancied film stars. I do like what's his name who plays Daddy Warbucks in Annie [Albert Finney], but he looks too much like my dad to fancy him. I suppose the one I've had the biggest crush on is Steve Buscemi.'

By no accounts, I venture, can Buscemi be called a looker. Does she not fancy more conventionally handsome film stars, such as George Clooney? 'No, I don't trust good-looking men. It's the pleasure-pain thing. Although strangely enough I've ended up with a very handsome boyfriend.'

Is he in the TV business? 'He's on the other side of the lens.' Laverne snorts with laughter. 'That's what a guy said to me who picked me up in a cab the other day. "Which side of the lens are you on?"'

As successful as Laverne is, she's also hosting a pop show for Channel 5, and a radio show on XFM, she seems never likely to take herself too seriously. And she is candid about her ignorance of certain subjects raised on Fanorama. 'I really had to bluff my way through one we had on The X-Files. The sci-fi genre leaves me stone cold. Star Trek? I don't understand why anyone would even watch it, let alone be a fan.' Fanorama, E4, weekdays, 5.30pm

King Kenneth

Kenneth Branagh was only 26 when he directed, co-produced and starred in a remake of Laurence Olivier's film Henry V. The sheer impertinence of this aroused the ire of the critics. 'The greatest act of hubris since Prometheus absconded with the rights to divine fire,' snorted one reviewer. Hubris – defined in my dictionary as overbearing pride, presumption or arrogance – has always been a favourite word among Branagh-knockers. When he wrote his autobiography at 28, albeit to help finance his theatre company Renaissance, he was, suggested someone at The Guardian, 'overdosing on hubris'.

Yet the object of all this bile – not to mention a fair amount of adulation, of course – seems surprisingly mild-mannered when I meet him. And humble, despite the extraordinary versatility which in the past year alone has seen him play Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Nazi Reinhard Heydrich and, in Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets, the young wizard's professor, Gilderoy Lockhart.

I ask Branagh whether he thinks he resembles Shackleton in any meaningful way? 'I suppose I have put myself in positions of risk and vulnerability,' he says. 'Though not remotely as bravely as Shackleton, I have attempted to take the path my gut tells me, not what I was supposed to do.' Which is another reason why some critics dislike him; he's impossible to categorise. More fool them. Celebrity Biographies – Kenneth Branagh*, Carlton Cinema, Monday 25th, 8.30pm, followed by Henry V, 9.00pm

LA CONFIDENTIAL

Lawrie Masterson passes on the latest celebrity and industry murmurings from Tinseltown

Young, up-and-coming actress Leelee Sobieski (Deep Impact) says she is in love for the first time, although she won't reveal the name of the man of her dreams. 'This is his shirt,' she said, rolling up her sleeves during an interview at the Toronto Film Festival ...

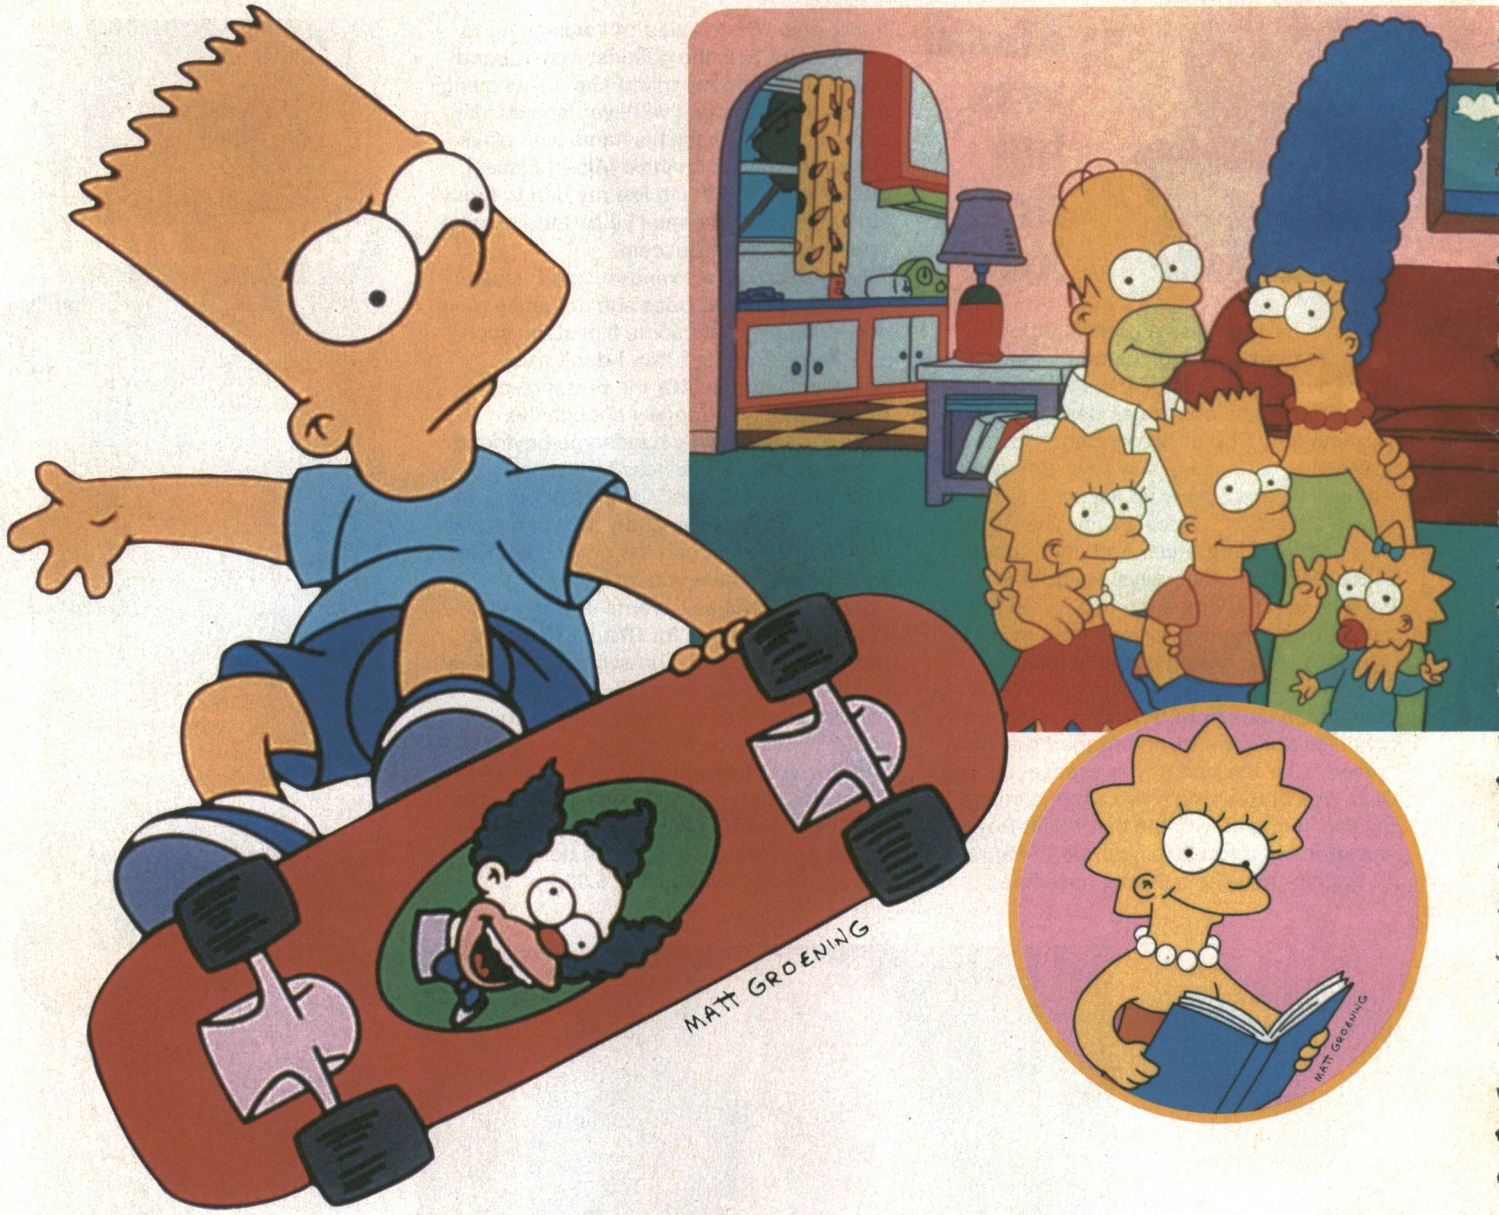
British actor Timothy Spall, the downtrodden cabbie in director Mike Leigh's latest film, All or Nothing, has won a role in the next Tom Cruise film The Last Samurai, to shoot in Japan, New Zealand and the US ...

Hilary Swank and Frances O'Connor will team up for Iron Jawed Angels, a TV movie about turn-of-the-century suffragettes ...

Nicole Kidman has put down $7.5m for an apartment in New York. Her new neighbours include fashion icon Calvin Klein ...

British actor Orlando Bloom, best known as Legolas Greenleaf in The Lord of the Rings, next up boards a pirate ship opposite Johnny Depp. The two are co-starring in Disney's Pirates of the Caribbean, recently disrupted temporarily after an on-set fire.



Yellow fever

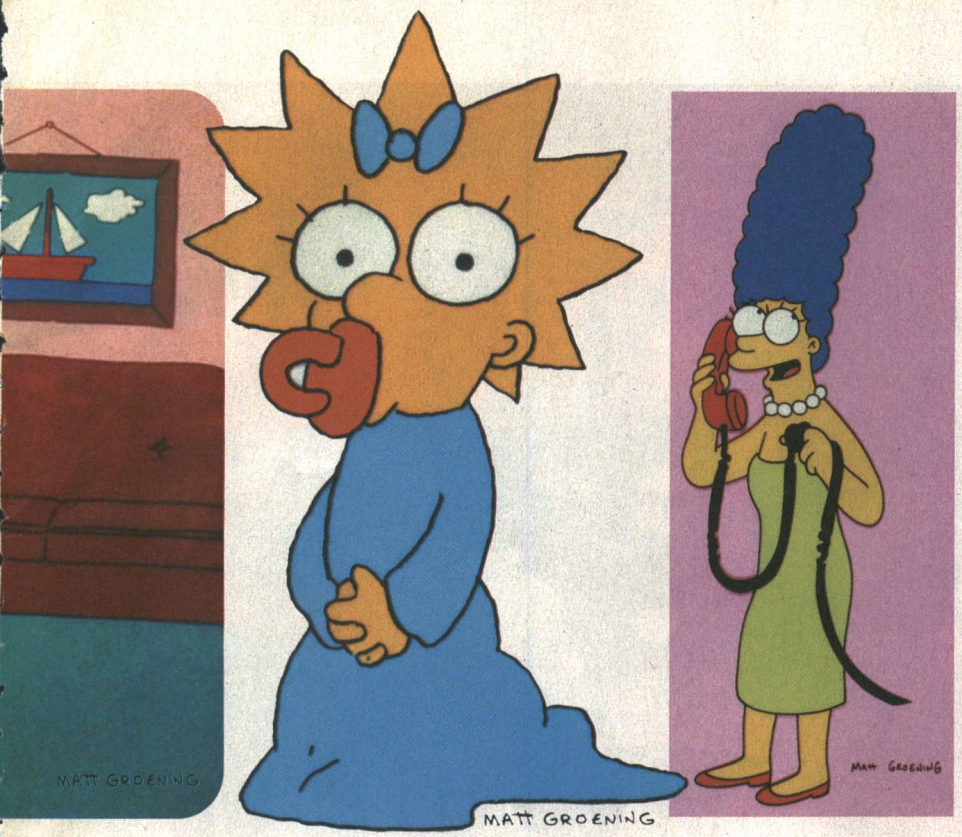
As Sky One shows some new episodes of The Simpsons, Brian Viner pays tribute to the cartoon family who put the fun in dysfunctional

SOON, THE SIMPSONS WILL be 300 brilliant episodes old, a record of longevity and sustained quality with which no other classic TV comedy even begins to compare. And over a plate of pasta, my lunch companion, a bearded man in his early fifties, pays generous tribute.

'I enjoy the way in which you can laugh at several different levels,' he enthuses. 'My seven-year-old enjoys it, my 15-year-old enjoys it, and I enjoy it. It is full of references, allusions, little side jokes, and I like the dense texture of it. Also, it is unusual for an American show in that it is very, very sharp about social issues. I appreciate that. It's very good moral propaganda.'

The identity of my lunch companion rather magnifies the significance of his appreciation of The Simpsons as good moral propaganda. His name is Rowan Williams, the new Archbishop of Canterbury.

There cannot be many ways in which the man who has become one of the world's most important spiritual leaders can be bracketed with his near-namesake Robbie Williams, not to mention Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, Rupert Murdoch, and Elizabeth Taylor.



All hail the Simpsons, from far left: Bart, the happy family, Lisa, Maggie, and Marge. Below: Doh! Homer's done it again

When Matt Groening invented a yellow family based on his own, he had little idea just how big The Simpsons would get, writes Lawrie Masterson

As The Simpsons continues to write itself into American television history, the creator of the series, Matt Groening, says he has no idea of the amount of money the show has made, both in sales around the world and spin-off merchandising.

'All I can say is I see Rupert Murdoch smiling a lot.'

Mr Murdoch, whose Fox Network makes The Simpsons, is apparently a fan of the subversively humorous, animated series, to the point of having played a parody of himself in one episode. 'There was one show where he was written in as being in prison and you've never seen Fox Network executives scurry so fast down the hall to get his reaction,' Groening laughs. 'We were told he said it would be an honour to be in prison on The Simpsons.'

Groening based the series on a combination of his own family and the sitcoms he grew up watching. His late father's name was Homer, he named Marge after his mother, Margaret, and he has sisters called Lisa and Maggie. The elder of his two sons is also called Homer.

Groening's first inkling that his animated creation had found a market for broad, accessible satire came early in the show's first season, when he went to DisneyWorld, Florida, wearing a Simpsons jacket.

'This crowd gathered around me trying to buy the jacket and that was the first point where I thought, "Gee, this might really go for a long time."'

'One of the nice things about doing an animated show is you can do whatever you want with the characters, and there's nothing more sad as when you see those horrible reunion shows of old sitcom casts and you see how old and decrepit they have gotten,' he says.

'With The Simpsons, they are as decrepit as they ever were.'

'The Simpsons is very, very sharp about social issues. I appreciate that. It's very good moral propaganda' Archbishop of Canterbury, Rowan Williams

But all the above are united in their devotion to The Simpsons, indeed all but Dr Williams have 'appeared' as guest voices. Murdoch, who owns the Fox TV network that transmits The Simpsons in the United States, was even game enough to provide the voice for an evil billionaire tycoon. On the other hand, since The Simpsons is estimated to have made Fox around a billion dollars, it might have been churlish of him to decline.

In the forthcoming new episodes of the series, The Rolling Stones join the show's long and distinguished line of guest voice artists.

Yeardley Smith, who voices the eight-year-old prodigy Lisa, has been bowled over before by guest artists, singling out for particular praise Michelle Pfeiffer, who 'played a co-worker of Homer's at the power plant and was great, really down to earth and more than willing to belch.' Michelle Pfeiffer was required to belch? 'Yes, several times actually. She was very good at it.' But no guests left her quite as starstruck, as bereft of her usual eloquence, as Mick Jagger. 'I was like, wow, you're Mick Jagger!'

Reportedly, the new series also has The Simpsons heading to Britain after winning a family holiday, and bumping into Prince William. It is not yet known whether the royal will play himself, but what is guaranteed is that the new series will be as exquisitely observed and sublimely witty as the previous 13.

The verdict of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in fact, is hard to improve upon; the enduring popularity of The Simpsons lies in its extraordinary attention to detail, in its depth of wit, and in its unique appeal to viewers of all ages. Hard as it is to believe of characters with bug eyes, bright yellow skin and four-digit hands – whose words of wisdom include Homer's fatherly advice to Bart: 'Son, when participating in sporting events, it's not whether you win or lose, it's how drunk you get' – the Simpsons also appeal because people identify with them. They may vie with the Windsors and the Kennedys for the right to be known as the world's favourite dysfunctional family, but the world, or at any rate America, loves them not least because, as research by Fox repeatedly shows, 'They are people like us.'

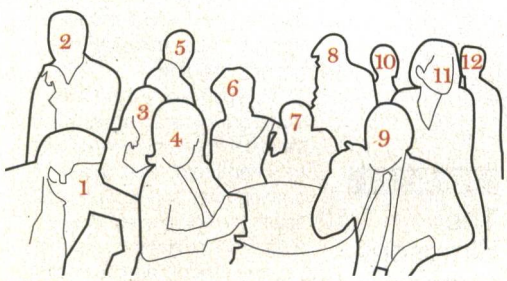
Hitting the high notes

As The Sopranos' fourth season attracts record-breaking audiences, the show's stars, James Gandolfini, Lorraine Bracco and Edie Falco, talk to us exclusively about its future. Interviews: Lawrie Masterson



1 Silvio (Steve Van Zandt) 2 Ralph (Joe Pantoliano) 3 Janice (Aida Turturro) 4 Carmela (Edie Falco) 5 Paulie (Tony Sirico) 6 Adriana (Drea de Matteo) 7 Christopher (Michael Imperioli) 8 Junior (Dominic Chianese) 9 Tony (James Gandolfini) 10 Meadow (Jamie-Lynn Sigler) 11 Dr Melfi (Lorraine Bracco) 12 Anthony Jr (Robert Iler)

MOB-BOSS TONY SOPRANO and his therapist Dr Jennifer Melfi are deep in conversation, the topics ranging from alter egos and anger suppression, to the end of the world as they now know it.

But this is not the Melfi office on the set of The Sopranos, the amazingly successful series about the New Jersey-underworld heavyweight and his two families – biological and Mafia.

This is the lap of luxury in neighbouring Manhattan, New York – with a view of Central Park from an expensive hotel suite – and it's actors James Gandolfini and Lorraine Bracco doing the talking. A little later they're to be joined by Edie Falco, who plays Gandolfini's on-screen wife, the harried Carmela.

Notoriously media-shy, Gandolfini, 41, is casually dressed and looks relaxed as he sips a diet soda. Bracco, in dark trouser-suit and white top, smokes a borrowed cigarette and laughs nervously about her forthcoming Broadway stint as Mrs Robinson in the revival of the Sixties counterculture classic The Graduate.

'I've not done anything naked before. But there's really nice lighting, which I was very pleased to see,' says the 47-year-old actress, who received an Oscar nomination for her first foray into the world of the Mob, in Martin Scorsese's epic GoodFellas. 'Oh, God help me,' she laughs – then, looking sideways at Gandolfini, she exclaims, 'Look at him. He can't wait!'

Currently into its fourth season on E4, The Sopranos has

'Someone from Croatia stopped me in the street about the show. That was a little shocking because I thought they had other things to worry about'
James Gandolfini

surpassed itself with each new series. Fans can't get enough, and in the US the new season's opening episode became the most watched programme in cable-channel HBO's history, attracting 13 million viewers. (It was also the most popular opening night of any US TV primetime show.)

In the wake of last year's September 11 terrorist attacks, and the economic uncertainty that followed, Tony Soprano is worried about his own business. Carmela frets over her family's long-term security, while at the same time casting a roving eye towards Tony's Neapolitan heavy, Furio Giunta (Federico Castelluccio).

Uncle Junior (Dominic Chianese) is facing trial, and while Christopher (Michael Imperioli) gets more heavily into heroin and plots to avenge an old murder, his girlfriend, Adriana (Drea de Matteo), confides in new friend 'Danielle' (Lola Glaudini), who's working undercover for the FBI.

The Sopranos has captivated audiences worldwide. Says a bemused Gandolfini: 'Someone from Croatia stopped me in the street. That was a little shocking because I thought they had other things to worry about.'

Nevertheless, the drama's next season is likely to be the last, with series creator David Chase having said he's moving on. In effect, Chase has ordered a 'hit' on the show.

'I don't want to do it without him and I don't believe anybody wants to,' Gandolfini says. 'HBO could go on – they own the show – but they'd be doing it without me. We'll see what happens, but I think you need an ending, you need an arc.

'To go into [next season] knowing it will be our last gives me 10 times more energy. I mean, if I thought we were going on for another three years it would be a very different story for me.

'But I know this will be the last one. You can put everything into this one and say thank you.'

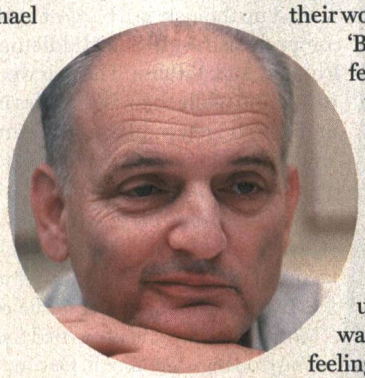
Adds Bracco: 'Nobody wants to do it without David because he's involved in every aspect of the show. I mean, he's a huge presence. They could recast the show, but I don't think they'll do that.'

According to Gandolfini, Chase already knows how the series will wind up but isn't sharing his thoughts. In the meantime, the actor is happy to continue – and to praise the quality of the scripts.

'The writing is there,' he says. 'You put the pants on, you put the stuff on, you have a few too many cups of coffee and you go to work. The writing always surprises me and makes me stretch. That's what keeps it interesting.'

Bracco says the scripts are 'better than a lot of movie scripts I read, because movies and regular TV are at the mercy of polls and advertisers' – unlike the subscription-only HBO, which in recent years has also generated such edgy series as Sex and the City, Six Feet Under and Oz.

'They decide they're going to do your show and they let you do it,' Gandolfini explains. 'They get smart people like David and let them get on with their work.



'But HBO are smart, too, and the few things they do have to say are usually very intelligent.'

Only Falco, it seems, would be happy for The Sopranos to remain open-ended. Dressed in black, and with her blonde hair cropped short, the 39-year-old actress walks in unannounced and is greeted warmly by her co-stars. 'My overall feeling is that I'm heartbroken,' Falco says of the show's impending end.

'I would do this forever. As long as these people are alive, there are stories to tell about them. But I utterly respect David Chase's decision to end it when he feels it's time. He's been in charge from the get-go and I think he should be in charge of this decision as well.'

But before that happens, we need to know, will Carmela finally be unfaithful to Tony, as he has been to her so many times?

'You really think I'm going to answer that question?' Falco asks in mock incredulity. 'I'm sworn to secrecy – about everything.' ■

In LOVE and war

For nearly two decades, Blind Date has brightened our screens with romance and fun galore. But down the years there's been heartache and scandal too – as Tina Ogle explains

WEDDING BELLS

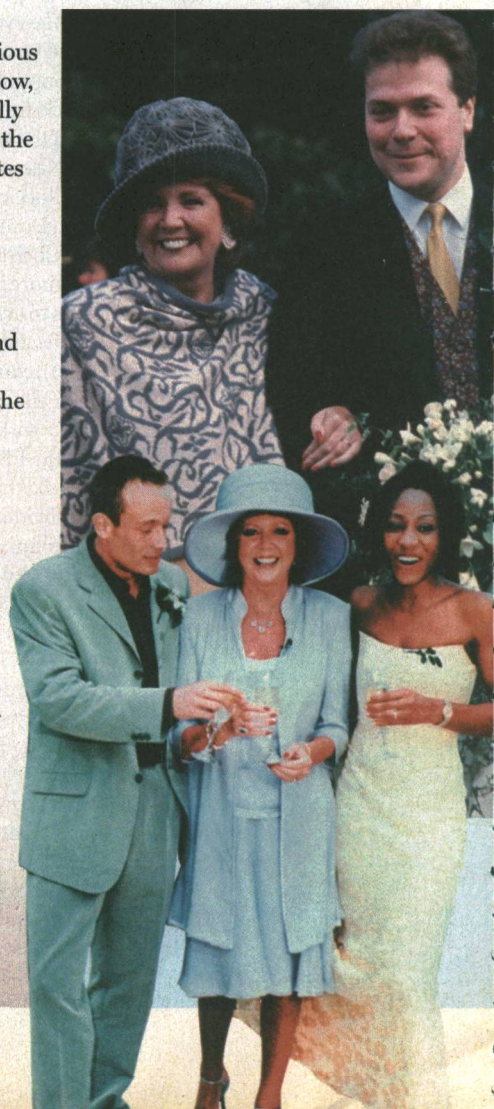
Blind Date, bless it, has been pairing off vivacious singles since 1985. And during 17 years, the show, helmed by flame-haired Cilla Black, has actually helped produce three weddings. Of course, for the lucky couples concerned, having their 15 minutes of fame turn into a lifetime of wedded bliss has been a spectacular bonus.

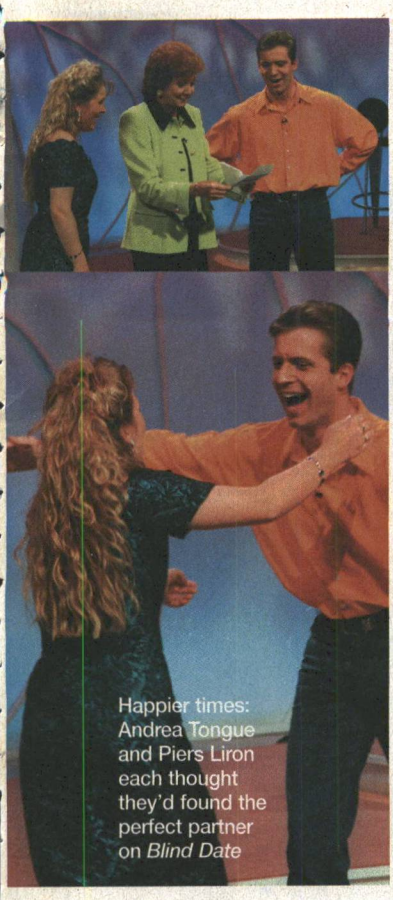
First up the aisle in a blaze of publicity were comprehensive-girl Sue Middleton and old Etonian Alex Tatham. The pair wed in October 1991 – and while their differences in background and their hugely public meeting and courtship might have suggested the shortest of liaisons, the partnership has endured.

Now the proud parents of Emily, eight, and Charlie, six, Alex and Sue couldn't be happier. Says Sue: 'I can't think of life with anyone else.'

Two years later, 'Golden Oldie' couple Lilian Morris and David Fensom tied the knot at Tiverton register office in Devon, only four months after their on-screen meeting.

Completing the marital hat trick are Paul Pratt and Anna Azonwanna, who married under the Barbados sun in October 1998. She chose him because an audience member yelled out, 'Go for number two!' Let's hope they tracked that person down and bought them bucket loads of champagne. The fact that Paul proposed to Anna during a Blind Date special reunion show only added to the nation's delight – and to that of the show's producers. ■





Happier times: Andrea Tongue and Piers Liron each thought they'd found the perfect partner on Blind Date

DATES FROM HELL

Of course, for many others, the Blind Date experience has meant not a trip to the altar but a store of bitter memories. But when you choose your date on the basis of something as trivial as them knowing the significance of the Blue Peter badge, what do you expect?

In October 1996, Andrea Tongue chose Piers Liron and the two were whisked off to Niagara Falls, where romance blossomed. Within weeks, though, a paper revealed that Liron had an ex-wife who he'd dumped when she became pregnant with his child – a little matter he'd not mentioned to Andrea. Piers and Andrea still became engaged, but what might have been another Blind Date wedding soon dissolved into bitter recriminations.

While disappointments of the heart are to be expected, contestant Nico Bajerski endured months of terror after his appearance. The overly frank auctioneer was beaten up several times by disgruntled viewers who took exception to his analysis of his blind date, Julie Stead. He'd said of her: 'I believe in reincarnation. But if Julie came back as a fly I hope I'd return as fly spray.'

Nico's remarks may have been funnier than the over-scripted answers to the questions posed in the 'picking' section of the show. But the nation was not amused: women would slap Nico in the street, and he received anonymous threats of violence and remained dateless for months. ■

SCANDALOUS BEHAVIOUR

A national institution, Blind Date likes to keep its secrets well under wraps. For years, journalists tried in vain to tunnel their way behind the scenes, until, in 1997, one finally managed it. Cosmopolitan reporter Nicola Gill fooled the entire Blind Date team into thinking she was a fun-loving secretarial temp with an adventurous sex life who just loved to travel the world.

Having undergone the rigorous selection process, Nicola was eventually told she was in – and in the prime position of a 'picker'. She chose accounts manager Paul Mankelow and off the couple went to Scotland to tour a whisky distillery, seal colony and reptile centre.

While undercover, Nicola learned what exactly goes on behind those screens – and soon revealed all to Cosmopolitan's readers. Even so, Blind Date got the last laugh. During the show's sofa segment, Nicola was exposed on national TV as a liar who'd deprived genuine romantics of a place on the show. Sure enough, five years later, Cilla – and the extrovert lovelorn – are still going strong. ■

ITV2 tells all

And don't forget, if you've ever wondered what exactly goes on backstage and on those idyllic island dates, then ITV2's Blind Date: Kiss and Tell will spill the beans, with behind-the-scenes footage screening later in the evening. Hosted by Top of the Pops' Sarah Cawood, and Brendan Courteney, the show has access to the green room where the rejects and rejecters will give their reactions after leaving the Blind Date stage. You can also hear what the pickers think of their choices, and catch the contestants' intimate feelings and confessions in their video diaries.

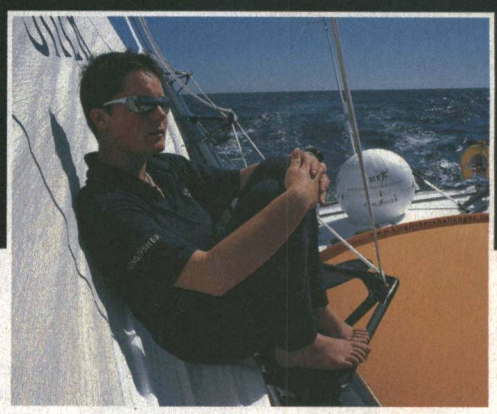
Life on an ocean wave



Navigating huge storms and the seven seas is what Ellen MacArthur lives for, and, as Sally O'Shaughnessy discovers, she's ready for more

NEW SERIES

Postcards from Ellen MacArthur

Discovery, starts Monday 4th, 8.30pm

THEY SAY THE DESIRE to face danger, to test your own mettle, is in the genes. Ellen MacArthur must have more of them than most. A record-breaking yachtswoman, the 26-year-old became a national heroine when, in 2000, she sailed to second place in the Vendée Globe solo round-the-world race.

While some of us are frightened to go out at night, this young Derbyshire woman spent 94 days alone on a boat battling the elements. Since her debut into full-time yachting in 1994, she has pushed herself through the most challenging round-the-world events there are, including the final frontier, sailing alone. Is she solitary by nature? 'Yes and no,' MacArthur explains. 'I think it's very different when you're on your own at sea. You're racing. You're working towards a goal. It's testing yourself. It's not the big storms that scare you, it's more the exhaustion.'

Is this something she was born into, I wonder? 'My aunty sailed,' she counters, 'but my mum and dad don't. I was lucky enough to sail when I was four years old, on my aunty's boat on the East Coast. We used to go out with the whole family, seven of us and the dog on a boat basically built for three. I think the thing that hooked me initially was the incredible feeling of freedom.'

Awarded an MBE and numerous other accolades, MacArthur is aware of the public's fascination with her courage. She's honoured, but could do without the celebrity. 'It doesn't make you feel any different,' she says. 'I'm still the same person.' Nonetheless, she's committed to her fans,

All at sea. Left, Kingfisher cuts an elegant dash, and, inset, a rare moment of relaxation for Ellen relating her experiences through her onboard films. She's also written a book about becoming the fastest woman to circumnavigate the globe, Taking on the World.

Now you'll be able to see her in action again as she sets sail for Guadeloupe on her latest race, the Route du Rhum, in a new Discovery series entitled Postcards from Ellen MacArthur. Six remote cameras on her boat, Kingfisher, plus two hand-held cameras will enable her to give exclusive broadcasts from on board. As she dashes across the Atlantic from St Malo in France you'll be with her to experience the highs and lows of her three-week trip.

'You're working towards a goal. It's testing yourself. It's not the big storms that scare you, it's more the exhaustion'

What does she think will be the greatest challenge of this race? 'It's a long way across the Atlantic. Apart from anything else, it's fearfully competitive. You know you're going to be exhausted. It's different from the Vendée Globe in that you sleep less. On my last transatlantic race I slept for 4.2 hours in every 24, generally taken in 20 or 40 minute snatches. You have to come to terms with it. Then there's the weather. You're setting off in winter with big depressions flying through with up to 65 knots. It's a very hostile environment.'

In some ways she won't be alone. One of the revolutions of 21st-century sailing has been in communication. Just like in her memorable ads for BT, she'll be able to chat to her mum and dad on board. 'We've got an ISDN link from the boat,' she admits. 'And communication is great from the point of view of safety. There are now beacons in strategic places.'

You might be forgiven for imagining that after all this time at sea, MacArthur would relax by enjoying a quiet night in at her Isle of Wight home. On the contrary. 'One of the first things I do to relax is go for a sail. It's my life.'

She won't be at home much, though. 'I'm racing round the world again this winter,' she reveals. 'I'm going to do a non-stop attempt on the Jules Verne to break the world record of 54 days. Fourteen of us on a 110ft catamaran. It's an amazing feeling to be with a group of people who share that very same goal with you.' ■

The past show

When comedian Mark Williams was offered the chance to load blast furnaces and recreate working life during the Industrial Revolution it suited him fine, writes Nick Griffiths

NOT A LOT OF PEOPLE know about the Industrial Revolution. One man who does is The Fast Show's Mark Williams, who plays half of the 'Suits you, Sir' duo and the yokel in the shed. This week, in fact, he will be mostly blowing glass.

'You were either taught the Industrial Revolution at school, or you weren't. I was,' says Williams. 'I even won a fourth-form history prize.'

Thus do we find him presenting Industrial Revelations on Discovery, which brings that period of history to life ... whatever it involved. 'Basically you're using factory methods instead of home methods, and machine power instead of hand power. It really was a revolution and it happened here in Britain, nowhere else.'

Taking place mainly from the mid-1700s to the mid-1800s, bringing us the likes of James Hargreaves' spinning jenny, Richard Arkwright's water frame, James Watt's steam engine and steel via the Bessemer process. And, of course, the building of canals, roads, factories and towns.

'There were terrible things done to people during that time – women and children working down mines – but at the same time there were fantastic achievements, and those achievements didn't come from management. They came from people's desire to make things and from ambition – working-class ambition. Not just the designers and the ship-builders. People could never have achieved those things without the shop floor, and it's about time we remembered that.

'Industrial Revelations isn't necessarily about industry, it's about invention, it's about links with the past, and the fact that a lot of those things are still going on, people still do those jobs.'

During the 13-part series, Williams will be piloting canal-boats, blowing glass, loading a blast furnace and meeting those who still use the traditional methods handed down from the Industrial Revolution.

Mark Williams is passionate about the subject. He grew up just outside the Black Country where much of the Revolution took place. Even so, fulfilling Williams's fascination with the period did produce the odd hitch. He says: 'We filmed a sequence about public health and water supply. We wanted a time-lapse shot of our trainee going in and out of a public toilet. He tried to be subtle, but in the end there was a camera pointing at a gent's toilet. This copper came up and said, "What are you doing?" and he replies, "We're making a film about the Industrial Revolution." The copper goes, "Yeah, right. Hop it!"' ■

HARBOR MASTER

Josh Hartnett was quietly impressive in modest movies like The Faculty, but his star status was confirmed with a major role in mega-budget WWII epic Pearl Harbor. Interview: Fiona Morrow

IF ANYONE IS LIVING PROOF of the American Dream, it's Josh Hartnett. The 24-year-old star of Pearl Harbor left his home town of St Paul, Minnesota, aged 18 with just a handful of high school plays behind him. He gave himself two months to make it in LA, but Hollywood saw him coming and within a fortnight Hartnett was cast as the troubled son of forensic psychologist Fitz in the US television version of Cracker.

Hartnett was heading for bigger things than a doomed TV show – even his rumoured five rejections from Dawson's Creek were probably a blessing in disguise. His performance in Halloween H20: 20 Years Later created an impressive teen following which grew further with the subsequent release of The Faculty. But it was his deliciously louche Trip Fontaine in The Virgin Suicides which made the critics sit up and pay attention.

If all that was the basis for a more than promising movie career, his next step guaranteed star status. Jerry Bruckheimer's mega-budget Pearl Harbor pitted Hartnett opposite Ben Affleck as the two GIs in love with Kate Beckinsale's character.

Following the film's cinema release, there was scarcely any magazine that could resist making the younger actor its cover star.

'It's crazy, overwhelming, this amount of press attention,' he says of his new-found fame. 'I was almost not going to do the movie because I wasn't sure if I really wanted this – this press blitz. My dad and I talked about it while washing the car and we came to the conclusion I should face the fear and do it. I didn't want to regret not doing it.

'Pearl Harbor was a phenomenon,' he continues. 'It was something new for me; it was going to be the one big thing that I did. It came at the right time – I liked the character and I thought it was going to be interesting to work on. Everyone's got to do one of these, everyone's got to pay the rent...'

'For the rest of their life?' I rather cheekily interject, and Hartnett takes the point with a gently ironic 'Yeah,' before adding, more seriously, 'It makes it easier to do your own projects.' (He has already set up his own production company.)

Still, if the worldwide hype has been too bewildering for him to get a handle on, it was the reaction of his friends and family that made the impact. 'It was quite embarrassing because everyone kept telling me how desperate they were to see it. No one had ever cared when a movie of mine came out before – except my parents. They were all like "The Virgin what?"'

Hartnett's conversation has a habit of turning back to his family. He continues to live in Minnesota, speaks freely of his love for his parents and siblings, and is determined to keep some perspective on the way his life has turned out.

'When you're not famous,' he says, 'you're looking for excitement in your life and when you are famous there's never a dull moment. So I figure when you are very famous you find yourself looking out for just that – some of the dull moments everyone else is trying to avoid.'

It's hard to imagine too many of those coming Hartnett's way any time soon. He's about to start work on a Hitchcock-style thriller called Wicker Park, and next year he'll be seen starring opposite Harrison Ford in the action drama Two Cops. Though he's determined not to be swept on to the celebrity circuit, he knows he'd be a fool to complain about the way things have turned out. 'I think celebrity is irrelevant but, at the same time, without people being interested in who we are and what we do, we wouldn't be successful – there would be no business. So I'm grateful for it, yet I shy away from it, too.'

Mostly, though, he's simply enjoying the ride. 'I'm aware of being goofed up and happy to go through it,' he shrugs. 'I'm a guy who likes to explore and I'm just looking for the next adventure.'

ALSO SHOWING

Blow
Sky Premier, Tuesday 19th, 10.00pm
It's testament to Johnny Depp's talent that he can make former cocaine magnate George Jung such a sympathetic character in this romanticised biopic; indeed, you'll find it difficult not to be rooting for the character. The whole thing is hauled in with considerable style and vigour by the late Ted Demme.

Spy Kids
Sky Premier, Saturday 9th, 8.00pm
An outrageously imaginative, gadget-laden family adventure that sees our young sibling heroes setting off to rescue their parents – former spies, played by Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino – who have come out of retirement only to get themselves kidnapped.

Lenny
Carlton Cinema, Thursday 14th, 12.20am
A foul-mouthed nightclub performer, a brilliant, ahead-of-his-time satirist, an obsessive crusader for free speech. Lenny Bruce was all of those things. And, at the height of his powers in the late-Fifties, he was also genuinely hilarious – a quality that doesn't really come across in Dustin Hoffman's otherwise admirable stab at impersonating the troubled stand-up legend.

Pale Rider
TCM, Sunday 24th, 9.00pm
A mysterious film, this Clint Eastwood western mixes elements of Shane with the director's own supernatural sagebrush saga High Plains Drifter. Eastwood stars as a ghostly, gun-fighting preacher who arouses troubling emotions when he arrives out of nowhere, seemingly invoked by the prayers of a teenage girl.

Head
Sky Cinema, Thursday 28th, 8.15am
With its antic energy and anarchic situations, the Sixties series The Monkees made few concessions to coherence. Still, the group's only foray into film, a hallucinogenic art movie that's very much a product of the Vietnam era, alienated many of the show's teenybopper fans who were hoping for more innocent tomfoolery.

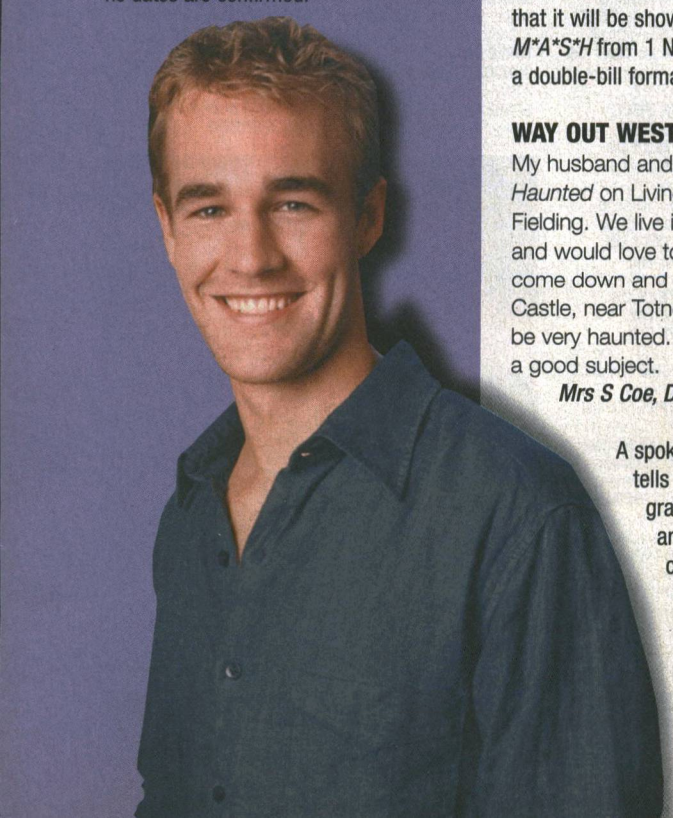
LETTER OF THE MONTH

Dreaming of Dawson

I am a huge fan of Dawson's Creek and, of course, was really upset after series five ended. But I was pleased to hear that Dawson's Creek was being shown right from the beginning, every night at 7.00pm! Does this mean that E4 are intending to repeat series two, three and four as well? And also, do you have any dates for when the new series of Dawson's Creek [starring James Van Der Beek, below] starts? Thanks for your help and keep up the good work!

Davina, email

Well done, Davina, you've won £50! An E4 spokesperson tells us that Dawson's Creek will be on E4, weeknights at 7.00pm, for the foreseeable future, so series two will start on 24 October (with the full 22 episodes) and then series three, four and five will follow accordingly. Series six will premiere on E4 sometime next year, but as yet no dates are confirmed.



KEEPING WATCH

After taping and watching the repeats of Third Watch, series one, recently, I began to agree with many American friends who believe it is an excellent show. I was just wondering if Sky One, or any other channel, has plans to purchase and show the next three series, or whether they have decided that it was not doing well enough over here. Thanks.

Rachel Proctor, email

Rachel, Channel 4 has shown series one and two of Third Watch, but cannot confirm if it will be showing series three. Sorry!

THE BEST MEDICINE

As a great enthusiast of *M*A*S*H*, is there any possibility of showing the later episodes of the show – the ones that include Harry Morgan as Colonel Potter, and the characters Charles Winchester [David Ogden Stiers] and BJ [Mike Farrell]? Congratulations on great programmes.

George, email

Paramount Comedy Channel tells us that it will be showing series four of *M*A*S*H* from 1 November. This will be a double-bill format starting at 7.00pm.

WAY OUT WEST FOR THE SPOOKS

My husband and I are big fans of Most Haunted on LivingTV, hosted by Yvette Fielding. We live in the West Country and would love to see the programme come down and stay in Berry Pomeroy Castle, near Totnes, as it's supposed to be very haunted. I think it would make a good subject.

Mrs S Coe, Devon

A spokesperson at LivingTV tells us the channel is very grateful for your interest and would love to consider Berry Pomeroy Castle for the show. Your suggestion has been forwarded to Yvette and the team.

BEWITCHED BY CHARMED

I'm a huge fan of Charmed, on LivingTV, but last year the channel said that series four would be starting early this year. I waited, and waited, but they didn't show it until late March. Please tell me that the same thing isn't going to happen again next year – the WB channel is showing series five now in the United States, and I really don't want to wait again.

Ruth Mutch, email

A LivingTV spokesperson replies: 'We have to wait until Spring 2003 in order for us to show the next series in one go. Unfortunately, in the States, there are many breaks in the series now and Charmed fans in the UK tell us they like to see the series continually. What we do promise is that the new series is going to be even more powerful!'

THREE CHEERS FOR STARGATE SG-1

I'm 23 years old and a great fan of Sky One's Stargate SG-1. I think the characters all deserve a good round of applause as they are an excellent team. More to the point, I'm a huge fan of the actor Richard Dean Anderson, who plays Colonel Jack O'Neil in the series. Does he have a fan club address or anything? Also, is there any chance you could print a picture of him, please? Thank you.

Jacqueline Richardson, Liverpool

The official Stargate SG-1 international fan club is online: http://www.lightspeedfineart.com/stargate.html. You can write to cast or crew members by post at: Stargate SG-1, c/o MGM, 2501 Colorado Avenue, Santa Monica, CA 90404.

HOMER'S WHERE THE HEART IS

I can't wait to see the new episodes of The Simpsons. After becoming hooked on this great series, I have managed to see most, if not all, of the episodes so far. There are so many characters to loathe or adore, but without doubt Homer is definitely my favourite!

I am looking forward to seeing him propping up the bar at Moe's and attempting to do his best for his family. I also like his attitude to work – I only wish I could get away with doing as little as he does.

Katie Lockyear, Telford

Don't miss our special Simpsons feature, including an interview with series creator Matt Groening, on pages 6-7, Katie!

AN OFFICE AFFAIR

I thought I'd write to say what a great show The Office is. In David Brent, Ricky Gervais has created one of the great comic characters of recent years. He is certainly the funniest character since Alan Partridge. I am now a big fan of Mr Gervais [pictured, above, centre, with fellow cast members in the new series]. What else has Mr Gervais appeared in?

Nick Sinclair, email

Ricky Gervais's singing (yes, singing) talents have actually been committed to vinyl, Nick. He was part of the group Seona Dancing in the Eighties and went on to manage Suede. He appeared on The 11 O'Clock Show and even did a stint with his own chat show, Meet Ricky Gervais, before hitting the comedy bullseye with The Office. Check out UK Gold this month, Tuesdays from 5th, 9.40pm, to see the first series again in all its delightful glory. ■

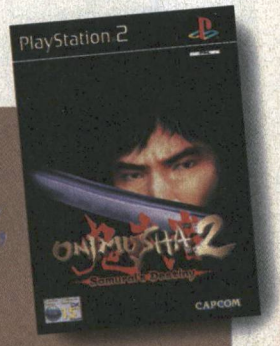
WIN!



Onimusha 2: Samurai's Destiny

The new PlayStation 2 game Onimusha 2: Samurai's Destiny is on sale now (rrp £39.99), bringing to life the late Japanese actor Yusaku Matsuda as Jubei Yagyu. Matsuda co-starred with Michael Douglas in the 1989 film Black Rain. The sequel to last year's award-winning blockbuster Onimusha: Warlords once again blends actual historical accounts of 16th-century Feudal Japan with fictional characters and storyline. It boasts a new battle system, enhanced sword action and new and diverse environments. Courtesy of Capcom Eurosoft, we have 10 copies of the game to be won.

To enter, name the 1989 film in which Yusaku Matsuda co-starred with Michael Douglas

Send your answer, with your name and address, on an email to onimusha@scorpiomm.co.uk or on a postcard to Onimusha competition/Scorpio, PO Box 2176, London W1A 5TW. Closing date 30 November 2002. The first 10 correct entries drawn at random will win. For full competition rules, see right.

The MTV Europe Music Awards

MTV, Thursday 14th

Ali G famously mocked last year's stars while introducing them, but you can be sure that at this year's Music Awards there'll be plenty more celebrities queuing up to perform. The most highly screened awards event in the world will take place at the Palau Sant Jordi in Barcelona.

After laying low in Los Angeles for the last 18 months, Robbie Williams makes his first comeback performance with his latest single, Feel, from the forthcoming album Escapology. No doubt he'll be hoping to repeat his success in previous years, when he's collected three gongs.

The event will be compered by rap superstar Sean PDiddy Combs and there will be live performances from Enrique Iglesias, Pink, Wyclef Jean and Coldplay.

COMEDY

South Park

Sky One, Saturday 2nd, 10.30pm

In the last series, America's war on terrorism was sent up, with Cartman accidentally dispatched to Afghanistan to take on the Taliban. So what irreverent outrages will creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone have in store for us in the new, sixth, series of this anarchic animation series?

In spite of Cartman's valiant efforts to persuade Congress in favour of stem cell research, poor Kenny is finally dead for good and Butters is making up the numbers. Ever the butt of his foul-mouthed schoolmates Cartman, Kyle and Stan's jokes, Butters had his very own episode last season where certain dark secrets about his family background emerged. It seems Butters' dad has been indulging in some 'late night shopping sprees', ones that his mom isn't too pleased about. Naturally Cartman et al can be relied upon to exploit Butters' problems rather than helping.

In tonight's episode, entitled Asspen, the boys find themselves alone on the slopes of Aspen, circa 1985, where Stan is challenged to a ski race.

The Mistress

Discovery, Wednesday 6th, 20th, 27th 9.35pm

You couldn't get more topical than this new series looking at the mistress, with Edwina Currie creating ripples with the revelations about her affair with John Major from her recently published diaries. While men have sought extra-marital relationships throughout history and across all cultures and social status, those in positions of power seem to be at it the most. Major may have been the most recent to be exposed but think of Bill Clinton, Prince Charles, Profumo and Napoleon Bonaparte.

This three-part series uses personal testimony, original documents and pictures, dramatisation and rare footage of famous mistresses to examine how attitudes have changed. Witness tales of powerful women like Madame de Pompadour and Nell Gwyn who enjoyed fulfilling and lucrative affairs. Plus stories throughout history of women who 'illicitly occupied the place of wife' – from Cleopatra to Anne Boleyn.

When Louis Met ...

UK Horizons, Friday 1st, 9.00pm

There's something about Louis Theroux's nerdy curiosity that lowers his subject's guard. Louis asks the questions you'd feel inhibited to ask, with a disarming innocence that seems to loosen the tongue of even the most hardened interviewees.

Here's a chance to see the series in which he gets up close and personal with a range of UK personalities. First up it's seasoned press handler, PR guru Max Clifford.

KIDS

Recess: School's Out

Disney, Sunday 24th, 7.00pm

TJ is left behind while his pals go to camp in this animated movie premiere based on the TV series.

Bored and missing his gang, he considers hanging out with the school snitch. Luckily his attention soon focuses on some strange activity in the empty school and he uncovers a plot to ban the summer holiday altogether. TJ's gang are summoned back to foil the evil plan and enjoy the rest of the holiday.

TRAVEL

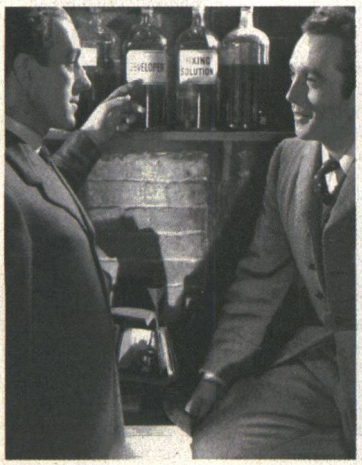
Legs around the Med

Travel Channel, starts Friday 29th, 8.30pm

This unusual travelling tale sees Simon Green try to shake off his alter-ego, transvestite dancer Betty.

Leading lady at the Funny Girls, dancer-choreographer Simon reigns supreme at the transvestite revue bar on Blackpool's Golden Mile.

Now he's dying for a change of scene and the prospect of a trip on a cruiser sounds just too tempting. Join him as he casts a critical eye on some of the Med's most popular cities.



FILM

The Best of British: A Week of Sir Alec Guinness

Carlton Cinema, from Monday 11th

Sir Alec Guinness was never finer than in Kind Hearts and Coronets, the 1949 black comedy in which he played eight roles as members of a wealthy family (Monday 11, 5.00pm). There's also a chance to see the 1955 romantic comedy To Paris with Love (Wednesday 13th, 5.30pm) and David Lean's adaptation of Dickens' Great Expectations (Friday 15th, 5.00pm).

COMEDY

Will & Grace

LivingTV, Wednesday 13th, 8.00pm

It's the cattiest US sitcom and to get you in the mood for the fourth series, which premieres in February, here's another dose of series three.

When your best friend, Will (Eric McCormack), is a handsome and successful gay lawyer, you're a beautiful interior decorator and you live in a gorgeous New York apartment, you'd have thought life would be sweet. Not for Grace Adler (Debra Messing).

Garden Rivals

UK Style, Sunday 10th, 4.00pm

This garden makeover series pitches two garden designers against each other. Anne-Marie Powell and Matt Clawson must submit plans and the homeowner chooses which they like best. The rejected designer then becomes general dogsbody for the day. In today's first episode of this re-run of the first series, Anne-Marie wins the day with her Mediterranean design and Matt is assigned to Handy Andy to help build the water feature.

TO THE POINT

THUMBS
Paramount Comedy Channel, Saturday 23rd, 11.35pm
In this bizarre comedy series, the stars are, surprisingly, thumbs. Tonight's instalment is a spoof of the film Titanic, entitled Thumbtanic. Young lovers Jake and Geranium embark on a dream voyage across the Atlantic, presumably unaware of the danger lurking ahead. If it's as historically accurate as the makers claim it to be, then we should all know what happens next, so, be sure to have a good hanky to hand.

MADONNA DAY
VH1, Saturday 23rd, from 9.00am
Madonna is, arguably, the world's greatest living diva, so it is only right that she has the odd day or two devoted to her. Today's worship includes the usual video offerings and concert footage, but the highlight is the UK premiere of Madonna's TV Moments (9.00pm), an assortment of clips that chart her rise to the top. In her early days, girls thought she was cool and boys thought she was sexy – the fact that many still view her like this is a testament to her lasting appeal.

BEHAVING BADLY
Sky One, Sunday 24th, 9.00pm
Living your life through a telescopic lens is probably the downside to fame, but wouldn't a few grand a day, or hour, soften the blow? But, no matter how rich and famous the stars become, they're still human and subject to the occasional mood swings, or camera-bashing antics. Last in the series.

JONATHAN CREEK
UK Gold, Wednesday 27th, 9.00pm
If you enjoy magic shows and a good murder mystery, then the chances are you're a fan of the crime-solving wizardry of illusion specialist Mr Creek (Alan Davies). Tonight, oddly enough, a woman dies mysteriously and it's up to the Paul Daniels of crime to save the day.

Put to THE TEST

The Ashes – the holy grail of English cricket. After successive hammerings at the hands of the Aussies, Nasser Hussain is on a mission to win back a nation's pride, writes Gareth Hargreaves

AS TROPHIES GO, the brown urn, barely bigger than your index finger, which houses the Ashes is nothing to shout about. In fact, you wouldn't look twice if you came across it in a charity store.

Yet in spite of its less than glamorous appearance, the charred contents have been furiously contested every few years since 1882.

What started as a jovial excuse for Victorian gentlemen to lecture the colonials on all that was good about being an Englishman, rapidly developed into an enmity that has been fed by the increasing desire to win at all cost.

Nowadays, there are few things more satisfying to Australians than to see the English having their noses rubbed well and truly in it. In 2001 the Baggy Greens arrived with many commentators predicting a closely fought series. After all, England had toured and performed admirably in both Pakistan and Sri Lanka. That said, if ever there was a match that emphasised the gaping chasm between being a good side and being a truly great one, it was the opening Test at Edgbaston.

England's hopes of glory proved short-lived. Their trump card with the bat, the previously free-scoring Marcus Trescothick, fell to only the seventh ball of the day, and with his dismissal the die was cast – Australia breezed to victory with an innings and 118 runs to spare. For England, it was the start of another wretched summer.

The close of the series was met with the traditional chorus of wailing in the English press, lamenting the state of 'our' game. But also grudging acceptance of the brilliance of the Aussies.

'Everyone knows what a fine team they are,' conceded England's captain Nasser Hussain. 'There's no point looking anywhere else to see what's required.'

It's been 15 years since England recorded their last successful Ashes campaign (the most memorable English win in recent times was 1981 when Ian Botham famously drove England to victory). The 1989 series win for Australia ushered in a period of complete Antipodean dominance, not only in Ashes cricket but also on the world scene. The 'golden generation' of the Waugh twins (Steve and Mark), Shane Warne, Glenn McGrath and Ricky Ponting swept all before them, but they are now in the twilight of their careers.

And therein lies a thread of encouragement for Hussain; the traditional backbone of the Aussie side has been beaten, not by their opponents, but by time. Indeed, Hussain has stated that he sees the Waughs'

Up for grabs: the coveted urn that contains the Ashes

exclusion from recent squads as a boon for England, as more inexperienced players will be placed in the pressure-cooker atmosphere of the Ashes.

It's hard not to share Hussain's infectious optimism, as his team are of the same mind. The assured form of openers Michael Vaughan and Trescothick against the bewildering spin of India and Sri Lanka even offers the delicious prospect of finally seeing England's nemesis, Shane Warne, dispatched to all corners in front of his own adoring public.

'We have got to work out how to get 20 wickets,' states Hussain. 'If we can get some key bowlers fit, I think we have a good chance against Australia – the best chance we have had for a while.'

That is a sentiment echoed both in professional cricket and media circles. The question is do they have the mental strength? The Aussies are past masters at digging out results and this is what England have to emulate. Fear not though – if England do lose you can rest safe in the knowledge that the real Ashes are tucked away at Lord's. You didn't think the MCC would hand them over to the colonials did you? That just wouldn't be cricket.

Giant strides

Rugby union star Martin Johnson tells Brian Viner an improvement is needed at coaching level to inspire confidence in international matches, such as this month's clashes against the Southern Hemisphere sides

Martin Johnson, who doesn't have many soft spots, has one for New Zealand.

The erstwhile England rugby union captain admits that he didn't grow up, rugby-wise, until, aged 19, he went to play rugby in New Zealand. 'That was the best thing I ever did,' he says. 'English rugby was so amateurish in its outlook at the time. The England team under Carling was getting going, but at club level we were years behind.'

Johnson took it with both enormous hands and, on his return, soon made his senior debut for England, against France. He got concussed, forgot where he was but carried on playing, and England won by a point. His career has followed a similarly dramatic script ever since, right up to his controversial three-week ban for punching the Saracens hooker Robbie Russell. And he's hoping for more drama, of the right kind, when England play New Zealand on Saturday 9th, the first of three matches against the Southern Hemisphere powers, the others being All-Blacks, Australia and South Africa.

Johnson is confident of his nation's chances. But not too much. Nearer seven foot tall than six, he might inspire over-confidence, but he doesn't indulge in it. And he won't be drawn on England's chances in next year's World Cup. 'English rugby is shaping up well,' he says. 'Young guys like Charlie Hodgson are coming through. But we need the right coaches speaking to the right young kids, because in rugby there is a hell of a lot to learn.'

DANNY MILLS

Disappointed with Leeds United's stuttering start to the season, Mills reflects on costly defeats, clear-the-air meetings and why consistency is likely to be the key to Premiership success

THERE'S A STRONG FEELING at Elland Road that we'll achieve our ultimate aim of Champions League qualification this term. To do so, it's crucial we iron out the deficiencies that have so far blighted our season.

Last campaign, our failure to beat the so called 'lesser' teams cost us a top-four finish. And, having lost to Sunderland, Birmingham and Blackburn already this season, we could shoot ourselves in the foot once again. Even more galling is the fact that we've beaten Newcastle and Manchester United convincingly, both times showing the ability and will to win that's a hallmark of our squad.

After the 1-0 defeat at Blackburn, we had a clear-the-air meeting with manager Terry Venables. It was made plain to us that we're fundamentally a very good side – but we must put in the same work rate, no matter who our opponents are.

The victory against Manchester United should, I feel, be the blueprint for the rest of the season. In that game we played the brand of free-flowing football that the manager's tried so hard to impress on us. But we also dug deep whenever our opponents had their tails up.

Hopefully, this victory over our arch rivals – the first in five years – brought an end to the Rio Ferdinand saga, which I feel overshadowed the match. Now Rio can get on with his football, and we can go on proving that our back four is just as solid without him.

Looking further afield, the season's opening months have seen patchy form from teams right through the division – Arsenal apart. This makes it one of the most open and exciting top-flight campaigns for years.

'Victory at White Hart Lane is vital if we're to get our season back on track'

In fact, even Arsenal have sometimes snatched victory with late, late goals. For me, Arsène Wenger's side have set the standard we must all strive to match. Like all great teams, they never know when they're beaten – a trait so long associated with Manchester United.

While the Gunners have proved their title potential, the remaining top-six places have changed hands regularly. Tottenham's early form certainly raised a few eyebrows – in many ways they remind me of the Leeds team that was emerging when I first joined the club.

Coach Glenn Hoddle seems to be giving Tottenham's youngsters the chance to prove themselves and, while they may not maintain a title challenge this season, I'm sure they'll be a force in the future. Robbie Keane's signing can only boost their chances and we'll certainly be watching him closely when we meet on Sunday 24th.

Naturally, we were disappointed to lose a player of his class. But I can understand why he left: we all want first-team football and, having done so well at the World Cup, Robbie felt he deserved more opportunities.

Certainly, victory at White Hart Lane is vital if we're to get our season back on track. Leeds have four more league games in November – the month that could well shape the rest of our season. Add in possible Uefa Cup ties, and it's clear how hectic life can be for a Premiership footballer.

These days the physical demands are so great that it's impossible to play every game. The boss thought it necessary to rest me for our recent Uefa Cup first-round, first-leg tie against the Ukraine's Metalurg Zaporizhzhya. That allowed me to recharge the batteries – bearing in mind that I played throughout the summer at the World Cup. ■

Leeds' patchy early season form included a 1-0 defeat at Blackburn, where Alan Smith's spot kick was saved by Brad Friedel

POSTCARDS FROM ELLEN MACARTHUR

DAILY 8.30PM STARTS NOVEMBER 4TH

Ellen MacArthur's on a mission to inspire us all to be more adventurous. Not only is she single-handedly crossing the Atlantic, she'll also be making a daily TV programme exclusively for Discovery Channel. 'Postcards from Ellen MacArthur' are daily video updates from her last race aboard her long-serving boat, the Kingfisher, as she battles against the ocean in the 'Route du Rhum' yacht race. And if that doesn't get you close enough to the action, you can e-mail questions to her during the race itself.
